COURSE DESCRIPTION |

The spread of the dental implants and the concept of osseointegration has revolutionized the dental treatment planning and related clinical procedures. The oldest procedure of the dental profession, in other words tooth extraction, has changed in relation to the spread of the dental implants. Today the extraction must meet criteria of minimally invasive and requires proper knowledge of procedures for bone reconstruction to prevent the resorption of the alveolar process following tooth extraction and always offer the patient the opportunity to be treated with a dental implant at the same time of the extraction or at delayed times.

Purpose of the presentation is to illustrate the modern techniques of dental extraction, the possibility to insert an implant in to the socket immediately after extraction and possibly restore it immediately, or alternatively do all the necessary procedures to minimize the post-extractive bone resorption.
